My dogs loves this chicken but its a product from China, so we wont be buying it anymore.  Its ver y hard to find any chicken products made in the USA but they are out there, but this one isnt.  It s too bad too because its a good product but I wont take any chances till they know what is going on with the china imports.

The Candy Blocks were a nice visual for the Lego Birthday party but the candy has little taste to it.  Very little of the 2 lbs that I bought were eaten and I threw the rest away.  I would not buy the candy again.

My dog LOVES these treats. They tend to have a very strong fish oil smell. So if you are afraid of the fishy smell, don't get it. But I think my dog likes it because of the smell. These treats are really small in size. They are great for training. You can give your dog several of these without worrying about him over eating. Amazon's price was much more reasonable than any other retailer. Y ou can buy a 1 pound bag on Amazon for almost the same price as a 6 ounce bag at other retailers.
It's definitely worth it to buy a big bag if your dog eats them a lot.

[3] Applying Random Forest

[5] Assignment 5: Apply Logistic Regression

1. Apply Logistic Regression on these feature sets

   - SET 1:Review text, preprocessed one converted into vectors using (BOW)
   - SET 2:Review text, preprocessed one converted into vectors using (TFIDF)
   - SET 3:Review text, preprocessed one converted into vectors using (AVG W2v)
   - SET 4:Review text, preprocessed one converted into vectors using (TFIDF W2v)

2. Hyper paramter tuning (find best hyper parameters corresponding the algorithm that you choose)

   - Find the best hyper parameter which will give the maximum AUC value
   - Find the best hyper paramter using k-fold cross validation or simple cross validation data
   - Use gridsearch cv or randomsearch cv or you can also write your own for loops to do this task of hyperparameter tuning

3. Pertubation Test

   - Get the weights W after fit your model with the data X i.e Train data.
   - Add a noise to the X (X' = X + e) and get the new data set X' (if X is a sparse matrix, X.data+=e)
   - Fit the model again on data X' and get the weights W'
   - Add a small eps value(to eliminate the divisible by zero error) to W and W' i.e W=W+10^-6 and W' = W'+10^-6
   - Now find the % change between W and W' (| (W-W') / (W) |)*100)
   - Calculate the 0th, 10th, 20th, 30th, ...100th percentiles, and observe any sudden rise in the values of percentage_change_vector
   - Ex: consider your 99th percentile is 1.3 and your 100th percentiles are 34.6, there is sudden rise from 1.3 to 34.6, now calculate the 99.1, 99.2, 99.3,..., 100th percentile values and get the proper value after which there is sudden rise the values, assume it is 2.5
   - Print the feature names whose % change is more than a threshold x(in our example it's 2.5)

4. Sparsity

   - Calculate sparsity on weight vector obtained after using L1 regularization

   NOTE: Do sparsity and multicollinearity for any one of the vectorizers. Bow or tf-idf is recommended.

5. Feature importance

   - Get top 10 important features for both positive and negative classes separately.

6. Feature engineering

   - To increase the performance of your model, you can also experiment with with feature engineering like :
     - Taking length of reviews as another feature.
     - Considering some features from review summary as well.

7. Representation of results

   - You need to plot the performance of model both on train data and cross validation data for each hyper parameter, like shown in the figure.
   - Once after you found the best hyper parameter, you need to train your model with it, and find the AUC on test data and plot the ROC curve on both train and test.
   - Along with plotting ROC curve, you need to print the confusion matrix with predicted and original labels of test data points. Please visualize your confusion matrices using seaborn heatmaps.

8. Conclusion

   - You need to summarize the results at the end of the notebook, summarize it in the table format. To print out a table please refer to this prettytable library link

Note: Data Leakage

1. There will be an issue of data-leakage if you vectorize the entire data and then split it into train/cv/test.
2. To avoid the issue of data-leakag, make sure to split your data first and then vectorize it.
3. While vectorizing your data, apply the method fit_transform() on you train data, and apply the method transform() on cv/test data.
4. For more details please go through this link.

1. The Linear Regression model in both the cases gave out 91.25% output(on an average).
2. BOW and TFIDF have given a better output when compared to all the 4 vectorizers.
3. If the number of data points to be classified is increased the output may be even more better, keeping in mind that the new data points may be all negative, all positive or may be balanced.
4. If the points are imbalanced the classifier can have different situations to deal with.
